You've finally made the decision to hire a writer. Congratulations! You're taking the next step in investing in a successful business. With writing off your list, you have that much more time to spend on other things that require your time and energy.

Now I know you've got important things to tend to. But before we get this relationship up and running, I want to go through a few things with you.

If you haven't worked with a writer before, it's normal to feel uncertain about what to expect. Part of my service is to help ease you into the process so we both get the most and the best out of this relationship.

So here's what you can expect:

First Things First

A free hour in person or on the phone consultation where we can discuss your expectations, vision and details concerning your project. This would be a good time to talk about word count, style, deadlines, specific tasks you would like me to address and flesh out other details including the estimated time it will take to work on this project and the costs involved.  In general, I charge $50 per hour for my writing and consultation services.*

Getting It Down

If it's a good fit and we're both happy to move forward, I'll write up a written contract via email stating what I'll be writing for you, as well as estimated time, costs and any other details we mentioned in our initial meeting.

Where Creativity Begins

Once I receive the first payment of agreed upon rate, I will begin the process of creating my craft for you. Whether you would like me to craft a snazzy, About you page for your website that authentically captures your personality or write snappy product descriptions for your creative goods, this process begins with me and ends with you. I am all about collaboration and part of working together and writing means that initially the first draft will most often be a "work-in-progress." Don't be put off by that. Part of my service includes two free edits where we will be working together on creating the best content for you.

If you would like to schedule an initial consultation or have any specific questions about my services, please contact me via email at bauyemura@gmail.com. I look forward to working with you!
